

BRIDE-TO-BE OF MAYFIELD DISTRICT GUEST AT SHOWER

A real jolly time was spent at the home of Mrs. E. Garneau on Tuesday night last when some fifty friends and well-wishers of Miss L. Hoyle who has been teaching at Mayfield school for the past two years, gathered for a surprise party in that young lady's honor on the occasion of her forthcoming marriage with Mr. R. Innes, of Sedgewick.

Dancing, cards and music sped the time away, and this to so good a purpose that the affair did not break up until nearly six a.m. next day. An excellent supper was spread by the hostess at midnight, while a second edition of the "cats" was served before the visitors departed for their respective homes in the early dawn, after the singing of "For she's a jolly good fellow!"

Miss Hoyle's work in the school and the place she has so ably filled in the community life of Mayfield district will cause her to be greatly missed but as one speaker so aptly put it—"Our loss is another's gain."

The following is a partial list of the presents in the "shower":—

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Babb and family cut glass berry bowl; Mr. and Mrs. Lewis and family, teapot; Mr. and Mrs. T. Sheridan, linen pillow covers; Mr. and Mrs. Wm. BYLAW WILL BE ALTERED TO INCREASE TOWN DOG TAXES

The following are the official minutes of a regular meeting of the Town Council held on Friday last when there were present:—Mayor Cork and Councillors Davison, Forster, Knowles and Welch.

The minutes of the last meeting having been adopted.

A communication was read from Mr. A. Gibson, agent for the Attorney General requesting that a prisoner's dock be prepared for use at criminal trials, as at present their use is a matter of separating the prisoner from the public in the court room.

Knowles-Davison:—That the request from the Attorney General's department re prisoners' dock be placed in the hands of Public Works department for necessary attention.—Carried.

A communication and account from the Calgary city hospital amounting to $8.00 for services re Lucy Klink was read.

Forster-Welch:—That the secretary write the General Hospital at Calgary re Lucy Klink informing them that this Council have no notice of her commitment and that the account presented is not chargeable to this municipality.—Carried.

An application was made by Mr. W. Barton for the purchase of lot 21 block 4 for the sum of $25.00, payable $20.00 cash and balance March 1st when transfer is made.

Welch-Forster:—That application for purchase of lot 21 block 4 be left in the hands of Property committee for further consideration.—Carried.

The committee on Fire, Water and Light reported as follows:—
We find that we have 1600 feet of hose in more or less good condition some of it is old and will stand less pressure than other newer hose. The couplings are in good shape and it is all ready for immediate use. We have a single chemical in good condition a double chemical needing two bottles and seals which we are ordering.

The fire engine is working fine, and is in first-class condition. We want to buy 200 feet of hose this year and 200 each year until we have 2000 ft. of good hose, then when the towns finances will stand it would like to place another hydrant north of the present one on Main Street, two or three blocks when we would be able to put

LOCAL CHAPTER I.O.D.E. DISBANES LABORS ENDED

At a social meeting of the Walter Musson chapter of the I.O.D.E. held on February 17th to consider the disbanding of the chapter, the motion to do this was unanimously carried. The balance of funds held by the chapter is to be spent on the erection of a cement shaft in the I.O.D.E. memorial plot at the local cemetery which will be placed there in the early Spring.

Mr. W. Barton has now moved his house from his farm south of town to his vacant lot on Second avenue.

Water on the school or any house in town.

The rooms in the fire hall are filled excepting one bed, some of the firemen work night shifts on the railroad and there is nearly always someone in the fire hall ready for duty.

Chief Joe Richardson takes especially good care of everything pertaining to the department and conducts a fire drill at the school once or twice a month, ringing the fire alarm without consulting the teachers or scholars and advises all scholars and teachers have been 1/2 a minute which is a record.

The fire engine is operated by Charlie Church, the hose-carts by Ryan, Thomas, Wilkins and Beatty. All these men have considerable experience, and understand the workings of the equipment well.

Although a report was adopted at a previous meeting in regard to having Mr. Bibby move his truck out of the firehall on account of the oil tank preventing firemen to ride on it, we have not so far been able to get the truck that the fire chief had arranged for and as it is necessary to have a truck we have decided to allow it to remain until we can do better.

Although this committee has every confidence in our fire chief and his department and feel that it is now in the best condition it has ever been in which we think last years committee we realize that a fire department is vitally important to the safety of the property and lives of our citizens and any suggestions that would tend to make it more efficient from the Mayor, the council or the secretary will always be welcomed by your committee and given our careful consideration.

The next month is the most dangerous for fires as the pipes are not so carefully watched and people become more careless as the end of the cold season approaches so we ask every householder to watch his pipes closely and help us to keep the fire losses down.

Some pilfering has been reported at recent fires. We are watching this very closely and offenders will be vigorously prosecuted, if caught.

Welch-Forster:—That the report of the Fire and Water committee be accepted.—Carried.

The committee on Public Works and Scavenging reported as follows:

(That in order to facilitate traffic and make streets passable since the late snowfall a plow to be used for the purpose of plowing off sidewalks has been constructed by Town employee Brown with the addition of some ironing by a blacksmith and has been used in placing the streets in better traffic condition and in addition for foot paths have been plowed to almost all locations in town where previously there was no sidewalk existing.

(The extra team that was employed by the Town from H. Renville was dispensed with on the evening of February 12th on account of the heavy fall of snow precluding the advantages employment of team for the hauling of ashes.

The Town team and equipment when not in service on cesspools and toilets is being employed in hauling cinders, which at the present time are the very best quality to places where they are being stocked for future distribution at the points where they are placed.

In connection with the claim of Mrs. James Church for alleged occurrence in Town your committee has been advised by the Town Solicitor that this Town can not legally entertain the claim of above party and we would advise that Mrs. Church be so notified according to our Solicitor's report covering her alleged claim.

The presiding Judge and Counsel that have occasion to use our Town Hall Council Chamber as a Court room on frequent occasions have requested that a Prisoner's Box be made and be available for use on such occasions as required. This matter has already been taken up and a figure for the construction of same, on a very moderate scale, should be available at

LOCAL BOYS RUN UP A BIG SCORE AGAINST VISITORS

Wainwright and Edgerton hockey teams met in a friendly tangle in the local rink on Thursday of last week. The visitors put up a hard fight but after the first period were hopelessly out-classed.

At the end of the first session the score stood 3-2 in favor of Wainwright but the local fans were not doing any worrying as they knew the home boys were carrying a bag of tricks up their sleeves which would be lost in a second.

In the second period the Lubricators cut loose with a burst of speed that fairly dazzled their opponents and when the bell announced the end of the usual span, they had annexed another five goals while the visitors drew a blank.

The third saw the Edgerton lad doing their utmost to cut down the lead of the locals but with out avail. In this period, the Wainwright youngsters were given plenty of opportunity to demonstrate their skill as they were kept on the ice most of the time and the way Aykroyd, Spence and Carroll tore into it, one would think they were defending the Stanley Cup.

Two more goals were notched up for Wainwright during the last encounter, the final score reading Wainwright 10, Edgerton 2.

Te Edgerton boys, have a nice bunch of athletes and with a little more system to their play and a few more games with outside teams they should be able to hold their own against any team on the line. We wish them every success and will welcome them back as they took their defeat like true sportsmen.

McPeak and Jackson were the pick of the visitors though all the boys worked hard.

The local boys worked some real system. York, Pamenter and Layne made three pretty goals on combination plays while Habkirk although playing defence, annexed four corners on his last rushes.

The younger members of the team were all going fine, Spence and Aykroyd each getting a goal.

Goal summary: Wainwright—Habkirk 4; York 3; Pamenter 1; Spence 1; Aykroyd 1; Edgerton—Jackson 2.

The Line Up
Wainwright: Johnson Goal, Boyd Defence, H. Wheeler, V. Wheeler, Center, Layne, Jackson, R. Wing, York, Sawyer, L. Wing, Pamenter, Edmunds, Subs, Aykroyd, E. Hallett, Spence, R. Hallett, Carroll, Umhach, Dupre.

Referee—D. Davidson.

Now you are all "hot up" by the Oil Edition, stay warm by using Black Diamond and Newcastle coal from the Atlas yard. Satisfaction is assured.

An early date. This is deemed quite necessary to segregate the prisoners from the main courtroom and place them in full view of the Court and to the exclusion of the general courtroom attendance.

Knowles-Davison:—That the report of the Public Works Committee be adopted.—Carried.

An application from Mrs. Lottie Dahlgren asking for an allowance under the Mothers' Allowance Act was brought forward, and the inspector presented his report which was unfavorable to the granting of an allowance under the conditions as stated in the application.

Forster-Welch:—That the report of Inspector Pawling re Mrs. Dahlgren under the Mothers' Allowance Act, be accepted, and that a copy be forwarded to the superintendent of Neglected children, and that the Mayor and Inspector sign the report as submitted that no allowance be granted to this mother.—Carried.

An application from Messrs. Pat Quinn and Johnston for the position of Town Auditors for 1926 on the same basis as governed the 1925 audit was read.

Forster-Davison:—That Messrs. Pat Quinn and Johnston be appointed auditors for the ensuing year.—Carried.

Councillor Forster gave notice that at the next regular meeting of Council he will introduce a motion to amend Bylaw No. 114 by striking out certain clauses and adding thereto "three dollars a dog and $10.00 for a bitch."

The Council then adjourned.

WAR VETERANS HOLD SUCCESSFUL WHIST DRIVE PARTY

A very pleasant time was spent at the "at home" of the G.W.V.A. on Wednesday evening, when a whist drive and several musical numbers filled the programme.

The signing of Mrs. Geo. Hudson and also Mrs. C. Church was much enjoyed, and to close out the festivities a little dance was put on and in which all took part. The prize winners at the card tables were:—
Ladies—Mrs. G. Grotreau 1; Mrs. Paxton 2; Mrs. J. Clifford 3.
Gents—Messrs C. Church 1; O. Grotreau 2; J. Alderman 3.

REPORT OF B. of T. REPRESENTATIVES TO RIBSTONE M.D. MEET'G

Notwithstanding that the ratepayers of Ribstone Municipal District had a lengthy and important program of business to discuss at their annual meeting held at Chauvin on Saturday last Reeve Lang was generous enough to allow Messrs. Cuthbertson and McLeod, representing the Wainwright Board of Trade, to address the meeting in the interests of the proposed Municipal Hospital. In fact it was under the discussion of a motion put to the meeting by the ratepayers, themselves that the opportunity was offered. Both the Wainwright representatives recognising that lengthy remarks that day would not be popular in view of the amount of business to be discussed, confined their remarks to a few pertinent points and made an earnest appeal for the adoption of the motion to circulate petitions in order that the ratepayers might have an opportunity of signing them with a view to having the hospital question later brought to a vote.

The motion carried being supported by many of the most prominent men of the district; it being specially noticeable that Dr. Folkens, their local medical doctor who is a farmer as well spoke in favor of the motion. The success of the project in the Ribstone Municipality is now assured, the required number of petitioners necessary to bring the vote being already obtained.

The representatives of the Wainwright Board of Trade feel well satisfied with the result of their efforts as far as Ribstone M. D. is concerned and are already predicting that the scheme will go over strong.

The two lines, at the bottom of the article which were not understood read "The right price is the price that an article can steadily be sold for and the right wage is the wage the employer can steadily pay."

Apparently even Henry Ford with all his countless millions, realizes that no individual or company could continue for any length of time to sell anything for less than it costs to manufacture or produce. It certainly would be suicidal for any lesser captain of industry than a Ford to attempt to put into practice his theory of "increasing wages and decreasing the price of the commodity produced" and sell at a loss indefinitely.

The Star will dare the sender of the article to start an auto manufacturing plant, pay higher wages to his employees "than Mr. Ford does and sell his product for less. YOUNG PEOPLE OF UNITED CHURCH DEBATE ON DRESS

The first meeting of the newly organized Young People's society of the United Church, held on Wednesday last and the programme previously announced was carried through very successfully.

After the devotional and bible study period, the special feature was a debate "Resolved that the fashions of today are more sensible than those of twenty to fifty years ago." The simpler and more abbreviated styles of today were upheld by R. Prosser and Miss V. Walton, while the more elaborate and ample fashions of a generation ago were supported by G. Taylor and Miss J. Sutherland.

Humor and sound argument were well mingled on both sides and although the judges after careful deliberation decided that the affirmative had gained their point, the honors of the contest were very evenly divided. During the evening, Mrs. D. Brown gave a nicely rendered vocal solo Mrs. Pybus some fine piano selections, and Mr. Conroy a couple of readings.

COUNTING NOSES IN PRAIRIE PROVINCES

OTTAWA. A new census of the population and agriculture of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta has been authorized by order-in-council. The department of the interior has been instructed to take the necessary preliminary steps in the matter. The time which will be consumed by the enumerators in making the proposed census, is approximated at ten days.

The last census of the three prairie provinces was taken in 1921, when the census for the whole of Canada was prepared. While the statistics for the dominion are gathered every ten years, the census for Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta is taken every five years, under the federal act constituting these provinces.

WE ARE NOT ALL "HENRY FORDS"

Some resident of Wainwright sent us a clipping out from the daily press this week which sets forth Henry Ford's method of checking a trade depression, in which he is quoted as stating that "it is good business always to raise wages and never lower them." These lines in the clipping were underlined and the party sending the clipping dared us to publish them. We accept his dare. There are real men.

The Star will dare the sender of the article to start an auto manufacturing plant, pay higher wages to his employees "than Mr. Ford does and sell his product for less. The Star along with every citizen of Wainwright eagerly awaits the day when some local genius arises in our midst who can "out Ford" Henry.

The rustlers' hair is discovered and it is also learned that their apparent leader, the Masked Rider, is a beautiful young woman. Ventures captures and falls in love with her. Judge Dyer, in concert with the rustlers, turns out to be Lew Walters, one of Milly Erne's abductors. Lassiter finds and kills Walters and his comrades. The others pursue and Lassiter and Jane take refuge on a plateau and they prepare to spend their life there.

As Lassiter, Tom Mix is one of the most consistent performers in motion pictures, and no better vehicle could be offered than his latest picture, "Oh you tony." Tom is a real actor, as well as a real man, physically equipped and courageous enough to perform in real life the exploits, he is called upon to do in this story of a long pursuit of miscreants. That is one big reason why audiences like him.

This picture, will be shown at the theatre Friday and Saturday, consisting of seven reels of human western action.

The W. I. have set the date for their big whist drive. This will be held in the theatre on the "Seventeenth of February" (March 17th). Tickets are now on sale. Get yours early.

First Pool of Crude Seen Here

This is Imperial Oil company's No. 1 well at Fabyan, discovery well in the Wainwright field which Mr. Stillman now declares to be a proven oil field. This well yielded a tremendous flow of gas, spraying heavy black oil which made the pool here shown for the drillers to wade in. It is commercial as a gusher only and there is no present market for the gas. Subsequent drilling, inspired by this showing, has discovered commercial oil production in the district.

"Bobbed Hair"

Copyright 1924 by P. F. Collier & Son Co. and G. P. Putnam's Sons
"BOBBED HAIR" was made famous by a play of this title by HAROLD ROSS, London, Etc.

A little gasp of released breath went up about him as a long, silky something, sinuous as if actually alive, warmly red—no, Auburn, excruciatingly Auburn—surface shewn of gold where the light touched it, lay across his open palm, the discarded tissue-paper wrapping slipping to the floor at his feet. A thick, deliciously curling lock of Connemara's famous hair, clipped off by vandal shears, and then romantically and daintily tied up in tissue paper and silver ribbons and sent to her lover, for all the world like the heron of pictures but out-of-date days when Knight-hood was in flower.

And Connemara the most up-to-the minute and rebellious of moderns, too. Still, it undoubtedly was a dramatic touch and went rather well with the fantastic costumes of the audience.

They broke into a storm of applause that was almost hysterical in its relief at the ending of the strain. And Salt, carried out of his usual grumpy pomposity of manner by this proof of his triumph forgot that he hated the limelight, and actually had made a stiff little speech before he could stop himself.

"Ladies and Gentlemen," he said seriously—"Ladies and Gentlemen, it has been very fittingly left to me by Miss Connemara Moore to make the evening's anticipated and happy announcement."

After which he went on and made it formally, correctly, as one who was at once a Saltonstall, a Cabot and an Adams might be expected to do, and it was neither a bad enough nor good enough speech to be remembered ten minutes after he made it by anyone present, if it had not been for the unforeseen denouement just before the next to the last sentence as he had it outlined in his mind.

Somebody's very muscular hand closed unexpectedly on Salt's arm and spun him right about face with a suddenness that jarred his teeth to shiver violently.

The voice of Bing Carrington, entirely shorn of its lazy Virginian drawl, fell in furious accents upon the close and startled air of the packed ballroom. "How in thunder," it inquired with ominous restraint, "do you get that way? Didn't you take in the very plain I expressed agreement that if Connemara bobbed her hair it meant she was engaged to me?"

With a quick gesture he snatched the Auburn lock from the others hand and held it aloft before all the eyes.

"Well!" demanded young Mr. Bingham Carrington, his chin up at least an inch and a half as he faced the room with his challenge. "Why—why—why?" It was Poppy Glenn on the verge of hysterics from sheer excitement. "That was the agreement of course it was, Bing!"

Stunned silence—broken giggles—a circle of staring eyes—"It," said Bing, in his most magnificent manner, which could be very magnificent indeed when he had an occasion to rise to the honor of an announcement for Miss Moore ad myself our engagement!" His eyes gleamed with reckless laughter that picked up answering smiles warm and friendly from those nearest him. "I'm waiting for congratulations everybody, and I'll take a darn lot of them to make up for what I went through when old Judson marched over and handed Salt that package," he wound up in an ingeniously youthful outburst.

Perhaps you can explain why, in that remarkable 'eventuality,' Salt asked me?" Connemara sent the package to me?"

"To let you know you were out of it of course," Bing Carrington said, with easy assurance, still holding on to Connemara's disputed curl. "And possibly, too, because she's a generous warm-hearted child who's sorry to hurt anyone, she sent it to you for a little keepsake to remember her by. Perfectly natural and simple thing to reason out for any one who understands Connie Moore." He shrugged, as if finished with the subject forever. "What makes you think all her hairs been cut off?" Salt asked angrily.

Poppy broke into the discussion before the Southerner could answer. "She told me she had planned one last puzzle," she announced, "and that she'd come in and untangle it as soon as you'd given up."

They all looked expectantly at the doors again, but this time nothing happened except the sudden and solemn booming of the grandfather clock in the hall, sounding the first stroke of twelve. And though no one attempted to put it into words, they were all vaguely aware at the same instant of a queer little sense of finality of the definite ending something, and the beginning of something else, nobody knew just what, as the old clock continued to strike, slowly and matter-of-factly.

Elderly, withered little Mr. Brewster, Miss Celimena's lawyer, broke the silence the clock left.

"The announcement had to be made before twelve to be binding," he said in his thin, throaty voice. "Two announcements have been made, but both cannot, of course, hold. Miss Connemara had better stop the play now and come forward to tell us which one of them is true. Otherwise—" He held out his hands, and shook a disapproving gray head.

"The announcement had to be made before twelve to be binding," he said in his thin, throaty voice. "Two announcements have been made, but both cannot, of course, hold. Miss Connemara had better stop the play now and come forward to tell us which one of them is true. Otherwise—" He held out his hands, and shook a disapproving gray head.

"Tell him," she gasped faintly, "it was a masquerade—my dress."

"Oh, she'll be here in a moment," Poppy assured him confidently. "And she's safe, either way because one of the announcements has to be legal, hasn't it, Mr. Brewster? Let's just us on dancing. She'll get tired of teasing us if she sees we're not waiting for her. So the orchestra was commanded to resume and everyone began to dance again, though in rather a half-hearted and desultory manner, with one eye on the door and the other uninterestedly on his partner."

An hour passed that was longer than all the rest of the evening before it put together, and still no Connemara with the promise untangling. At the end of that time Miss Celimena her face pale, beckoned both Saltstall and Bing into a corner of the ballroom.

"Something's happened to her," she said, with a little catch in her voice. "She'll never carry a joke as far as this. I won't you—won't both go out and look for her? Poppy and some of the girls and I will search the house."

Very soberly, their former hostility forgotten, the two went out, and Miss Celimena, her hand in Poppy's strong arm, walked heavily toward the hall and the staircase at which had already ticked off so much anxiety just preparing to sound two when an anxious group of unsuccessful searchers, met at the open front door, and mutely asked and answered the question that was in every eye, but which nobody wanted to put into words.

"Perhaps," suggested the withered little lawyer croakily, since there seemed to be no other offers of advice as to the next step—"perhaps we had better telephone the police at Greenwich."

Miss Celimena found her voice at that, and screamed: "Police! What for?" "Why—eh—it's the customary thing Miss Celimena, when a person is missing. Nothing to be alarmed about—quite the contrary, I assure you."

His eagerness to reassure was more alarming than openly expressed doubt. But Miss Celimena's long years of repression stood her in excellent stead now. She was up against something frightening and unpleasant, but after that first terrified outcry, she had herself well in hand.

"The telephone is on that table behind you," she said quite calmly. "Will you call them, please, Mr. Brewster?" She stood at his shoulder quiet and controlled while he talked over the wire for several minutes. At length he turned to her to ask, "They want to know how she was dressed when you last saw her?"

Then, indeed, for a flash a quiver passed across the set face. It hurt Miss Celimena, even in the midst of her fears, for Connemara's safety, to tell an outsider that a Moore had so completely forgotten family tradition and dignity as to disappear in the unbecoming garb of a Dominican Sister at a fancy dress ball.

"Tell him," she gasped faintly, "it was a masquerade—my dress."

Brewster did so, describing the costume with painful conscientiousness. They saw him listen intently while a look of dawning horror and incredulity slowly spread over his face. This he said, jerking into the moustaches. "Thank you—yes, I'll tell 'em," and hung up the receiver.

"What is it? Miss Celimena asked, with feverish eagerness. "He had some news; I saw it in your face."

"A traffic officer held up a car about eleven in Greenwich for speeding, and let them go when he found there was a nun in it, on her way, she told him of emergency cases," the lawyer said slowly.

"My description and the officer's tallied exactly. Fortunately—or unfortunately, I'm not sure which—" he put one thin, confusedly to his head—"the man took the license number. There was no one in the car but the nun and a well-dressed young man who was driving."

"Go on," Miss Celimena said hoarsely. "Can't they look up the number and find out whose car it was?"

Brewster hesitated. "They did," he said; then, brusquely: "The number was that of a car reported stolen yesterday morning from New Haven."

CHAPTER V

By Ed. Streeter

The car stopped just outside the door of the engine room. A sickly sweet smell of hot oil came billowing forth into the close passageway, driving before it the sharp, salt smell of seaweed and the faint odor of muskiness with interest. The night had already offered such proof of the abundance of its sensations that they had both arrived at a state of acceptance such as Alice must have reached when she rose from the Mad Hatter's tea party. Nor was their trust to be abused.

The check suit squeezed along the side of the Isotta. Without so much as a glance at the occupants of the front seat, it opened the rear door and calmly unbuttoned the floor carpet of the tonneau. A swift, searching hand was inserted under the loose corner—long hand with thin, tapering fingers quite out of keeping with its home torso, a hand that might sever a watch from its chain or a baby from its mother without the owners of either of their loss.

"When it reappeared it gripped between an unbuttoned thumb and forefinger a second torn bit of paper. This the owner of the hand compared with the piece which he had taken from his pocket. Then carefully and deliberately he placed the two torn ends together. The jagged ends fitted like the locking bits of a picture puzzle.

The knuckles of Constance Mary's hand showed white from the tenseness of her grip on the side of the car. The soft material of her mask reflected her short, sharp breathing. The color had left Lucy's face. He stared at the fantastic stranger with the horrified glare of one who has just witnessed the execution of a ghastly and foul deed.

The performer, on the other hand, registered relief on every crimson feature. "I'm Pooch," he admitted with a bright smile and then added, "Thank God," either in gratitude for his identity or for some unknown and extraneous reason. Without further introduction he climbed through the open door of the tonneau and sank heavily into his back seat.

Lucy glanced at Sister Connemara. Her gaze was fixed on his so intently that his own dropped before it and he focussed his attention on this second addition to his evening's entertainment.

"So you're Pooch?" he said finally, not so much because he doubted as from an uneasy feeling that the conversation must be maintained.

"In the flesh," boasted Mr. Pooch. "Cast your peepers over the passports."

He handed the two slips of paper to Lucy. Under the hooded dashboard light the man and the girl examined them curiously. They were two parts of a sheet torn from a pad of cheap ruled writing paper. On either half was printed a number which corresponded with the license number of Lucy's car. On the reverse side of each half was written, "S11st" and underneath this was drawn a crude anchor around Without further introduction he climbed through the open door of the tonneau.

A man squeezed through the passage between the wall of the engine room and the truck in front of them. This in itself was not extraordinary but he was by no means an ordinary man. Indeed, had you seen him selling tickets in front of a side show you must have immediately purchased admission on the theory that any exhibition of human misprints that could waste such material for the collection of dimes must indeed contain rare pi beneath its canvas.

A battered check cap with a veritable awning of a peak hung miraculously to the side of his head at an angle that made it difficult to say if it served as an ear muff or a head covering.

certain it was that it constituted the only head covering available for the hemisphere of his cranium which had been left exposed to the night was as free from hair as a country hotel matress. Under the light it had the sheen of an oyster shell. The simile ends there, however, for his skin, far from being mother of pearl in color was pigmented with a California sunset so brilliantly crimson in hue that in the twilight of the passageway it appeared to glow like molten metal. He wore a suit checked in the proportions of a leaded glass window. The skirt of his coat ran a race with the lapels which it won just short of his knees. Where the lapels gave up they were brought together by a black cord neatly secured at either end by two enormous pearl buttons. A spear or a bayonet might have been used as a last for his shoes to which half a dozen pearl buttons still clung desperately as mementoes of better days. From the corner of his mouth hung a cigar, the charred end of which had opened like the petals of a rare night flower.

The bizarre vision stepped clear of the rear end of the truck, carefully brushed the knees of his baggy trousers, and then, without straightening up proceeded to examine the license plate of the Isotta. Apparently satisfied by his inspection, he drew from his inside pocket a torn piece of paper which he read by the aid of the light over the engine-room door.

Lacy and Sister Connemara watched his movements with interest. The night had already offered such proof of the abundance of its sensations that they had both arrived at a state of acceptance such as Alice must have reached when she rose from the Mad Hatter's tea party. Nor was their trust to be abused.

The check suit squeezed along the side of the Isotta. Without so much as a glance at the occupants of the front seat, it opened the rear door and calmly unbuttoned the floor carpet of the tonneau. A swift, searching hand was inserted under the loose corner—long hand with thin, tapering fingers quite out of keeping with its home torso, a hand that might sever a watch from its chain or a baby from its mother without the owners of either of their loss.

"When it reappeared it gripped between an unbuttoned thumb and forefinger a second torn bit of paper. This the owner of the hand compared with the piece which he had taken from his pocket. Then carefully and deliberately he placed the two torn ends together. The jagged ends fitted like the locking bits of a picture puzzle.

ENJOYING HIS FIRST COON COAT

LORD WILLINGDON, prominent British statesman, who has been mentioned as a possible successor to Lord Bynas as Governor-General of Canada, is now in the Dominion on his way to China on a mission for the British Foreign Office in connection with the Boxer indemnity. Lord Willingdon is such here in a coon coat which he secured in Montreal and which he is thoroughly enjoying during his trip across Canada by Canadian National Railways in company with Lady Willingdon.

During their visit to the Dominion, Lord and Lady Willingdon are being entertained by the Governor-General and the Lieutenant-Governors of Ontario and Manitoba, spending a day in Winnipeg, and a short time in Vancouver and Victoria before sailing for the Orient. They are accompanied on the rail journey by Mr. G. K. Howard, Canadian National general tourist agent.

Lord Willingdon, who is Lord-in-waiting to His Majesty King George, and whose home is at Hastings, England, has been Governor of Bombay and Madras. He was largely responsible for the return of the secession of the City of Quebec from the City of Hastings. This secession, which was removed at the time of the British conquest of Canada, was held until last fall by Hastings, when, through the efforts of Lord Willingdon and Hon. P. C. Larkin, Canadian High Commissioner in London, it was returned to Quebec.

rendered lendable—that considerable interest is being shown in corn and the many products made from it.

The large percentage of destitute (the energy producing element in food) which appears in some of the products of corn—such as corn syrup—has brought these products to the attention of some of these gentlemen of research.

Many leading doctors and dietitians are today emphasizing the value of corn syrup as a daily food, especially for growing children and in cases of undernourishment.

It is also interesting from the trade standpoint to note that one of our leading manufacturers, the Canada Star Company, Montreal, has a tremendous output of corn syrup. Their Crown Brand Syrup is claimed to contain over 35% of that magic product—Dextrose.

WAINWRIGHT, ALBERTA FEBRUARY 24th, 1926

DOCTORS AND ADVERTISING

It has often occurred to us, that for down right topsy turvydom, the field of medicine takes the cake. On the one hand we have patent medicine manufacturers using every trick that can be turned with paper, ink and a fertile brain, while on the other hand, almost every medical graduate leaves college with the deep rooted determination not to advertise.
"Hanging out a shingle" and perhaps a professional card in a newspaper is for medical men, going the limit.
Of all the professions that of medicine is perhaps the most important.
We need a doctor to help us into this vale of tears, and generally call on one to prevent us from prematurely going out. If during the passage from nothing to three score years and ten, a doctor is called, we expect him to come on the run and perform miracles when he arrives. That, the main the profession lives up to the opportunities in this regard is well known and a matter of history. In the field of research, too, history shows a brilliant array of conquests by the medical profession. In spite of all this, the profession's determination to make an imperfect man, the medical profession never seems to give up hope but is equally determined to make a perfect one. The sacrifices made, as evidenced by victims of the X-ray, does not halt and one triumph only creates the desire for a greater one. But with all its virtues, the medical profession makes a grave omission by allowing and encouraging other people to tell the public what it is or should be but able to explain. While patent medicine manufacturers by column upon column of advertising space and take tens of thousands of dollars from the public (some of which is spent wisely and some unwisely) many doctors sit in their offices awaiting patients. In scientific research the medical profession has never lagged but in acquainting the public regarding itself and its work, it is woefully behind the times.

There was a time, no doubt, when advertisements were meant to contain nothing more than a straight solicitation of business. But those days have passed. Today, many advertisements are a real source of information, and the reader is wiser for having read them, whether he actually responds to the message or not. The implication of "touting" has almost disappeared from modern advertising, rather,
the individual of firm who neglects to advertise is neglecting an opportunity for service to the public which his trade or profession makes him responsible for. The medical profession would lose nothing of its dignity by proper advertising, instead its field of usefulness would be enlarged and if in the process its finances were increased, no one would complain about that.—Exchange.

Sun Life's
Great Record

New records have been made so consistently of late years by the Sun
Life Assurance Company of Canada, that fresh ones almost cease to create surprise. But the fifty-fifth annual statement submitted at the meeting of the shareholders on the 9th instant, is especially noteworthy because it shows that new levels of business have been reached which are epochal in their nature. Never before has a Canadian company attained the billion dollar mark of assurance in force. The only occasion when it has been approached was last year when the success of the Sun Life Company itself forecasted its possibility.

The report, now released, indicates that the year's business has considerably exceeded that amount. The actual business reported by President T. B.
Macaulay is $1,021,097.10—a truly colossal amount. The increase over last year's high figure is almost $150, 000,000. Nearly 60,000 new policies paid for, and after deducting amounts re-assured the amount of new policies paid for was $193,477,057. The new business for the year was in excess of total amount carried by the Company
thirteen years ago.

For fifty years the Company has actually doubled its business every five years. This thrifty practice was never achieved when the totals ran into very much smaller figures. That the doubling process has been continued quinquennially when totals have climbed to such large amounts, indicates the vigour and enterprise with which the business of the Company is being carried on.

The increase in net income over last year was nearly $7,000,000, the total being $69,147,413.

Payments to policyholders and beneficiaries in respect of death claims, matured endowment, profits etc., amount to $35,441,582. There has been paid out under this head since the Company was organized $219,239,710.

There has been corresponding growth in assets, the increase for the year being $28,925,738, bringing the total value of Company assets to $303,056, 145.

In a recent speech at the Babson Business conference, A. Vere Shaw, investment counsel of New York spoke of the Sun Life as being probably the best investor among the life assurance companies on the American continent. That estimate seems to be justified by the excellent returns
shown in the report from the Sun
Life Company's Investment Department. At a time when interest rates show a tendency to decline, the Company has been able not merely to continue but to increase its record in this connection. The rate earned during the year on the mean invested assets was 6.41 per cent. A net profit of $2,215, 772 was realized on sales of municipal debentures and other securities wisely bought, and sold when they had advanced to high premiums.

The profits earned by the Company
during the year, based on the increase in the valuation of its securities at made by government authorities has been $21,666,284. From this amount it has been thought advisable to deduct
$3,000,000.

Increased profits to policyholders
are announced for the sixth consecutive time.

$7,662,784. After deducting this sum adding $2,500,000 to Contingency Account, writing $750,000 off of the book value of Head Office, branch buildings and real estate, setting aside $350,000
to further strengthen the special reserve to provide for possible greater longevity among annuitants, and deducting accretions to Shareholders' Account, the Company has been able to add $6,532,642 to undivided profits.
This brings the total surplus over all liabilities, Contingency accounts, and Capital up to $28,640,000.

It is significant that on the day that the Sun Life Company formally opened its fine completed head office building, President Macaulay announced that provision must at once be made for further enlargement. Already eleven hundred people are employed at the Head Office. The international character of the institution, which is already operating in forty-four countries and states, is further emphasized in expansions now taking place in a number of the larger cities and principal states of the American Union.

In its strength, the scope of its activities, the rapidity of its growth and its vigour and prosperity, the Sun Life Assurance Company now ranks among the first financial institutions of Canada.

THE GROWING USE
OF HULLESS OATS

(Experimental Farms Note)
Liberty and Laurel are two hullless varieties. Liberty (Ottawa 480) has been grown at the Scott Experimental Station since 1919. Laurel (Ottawa 477 was introduced in 1924 and has yielded considerably higher than Liberty in a two year average. When thirty per cent is allowed for hull, Laurel fields as much per acre as Banner (Ottawa 40)—one of the most universal sorts in commercial use.
Hullless varieties are more susceptible to smut, and should be treated with copper carbonate, as the ordinary formaldehyde impairs the germination of the seed. Hullless oats shattered more easily when ripe than the hulled sorts. On the other hand, it is not advisable to thresh hullless oats
when damp on account of the tendency to heat, due to the lack of hull to absorb the moisture.

As a feed for calves, growing pigs
and poultry, hullless oats are increasing in popularity. Their low percentage of fibre makes them of particular value as a feed for weaning purposes.
At this Station, hullless oats have given good results when fed to calves for the first month after weaning, to pigs
for the first six weeks and to chickens
both in the scratch grain and mash.

During the winter of 1923-24, fourteen fall pigs were divided into two equal lots. One lot was fed a meal mixture containing common oat chop and the other lot received the same mixture with the exception that the common oat chop was replaced by hullless oat chop. Approximately 25 per cent was allowed for hulls on the common oats.

The quantity of feed required per hundred pounds gain was 120 pounds less in the lot getting hullless oats. The gain per pig was 23 pounds greater and the selling price less cost of feed was $2.35 more per pig. These results in favour of hullless oats are striking, but it must be remembered that this is the result from one feeding experiment.

In the test conducted in 1924-25 to determine the value of feeding hullless oats as compared with common oats in the ration for laying pullets, the hullless oats increased the egg production and decreased the cost of producing eggs by 3 1/2 cents per dozen.

The test of the previous year showed only 3 1/2 cents per dozen eggs in favour of the hullless oats.

In the low-price field
where is the car
that equals it?

Before buying a car—open or closed—in the low-priced field, ask yourself these questions:

1. Is it as comfortable and smart in appearance as the New Chevrolet?
2. Does it boast of such advanced features as dry disc clutch, genuine Duco finish, vacuum gasoline system with tank in rear?
3. Has it an overhead-valve engine?
4. Has it a genuine Fisher Body?
5. Can it duplicate Chevrolet's speed, hill-climbing ability and all-round dependability?

Because no other car at or near Chevrolet price can answer all these questions and because Chevrolet delivers a greater measure of quality and value for your dollars than any other low-priced car—this is the car for you.

Urgent Conference on Western Route
Premier Brownlee has wired Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King suggesting a conference on the western route. This matter has been especially before the government for the past few days, and the entire question of Alberta's interest in the development of the Pacific route and Vancouver harbor has been under consideration. The request for action at Ottawa, resulting from this discussion, touches on some points of vital concern to the west as follows: "Government of Alberta urges upon your advisability holding conference producers and others concerned to discuss whole question of future development of western route and Vancouver harbor. This route most logical for future export Alberta grain and other products. Am sure you recognize right of these producing interests to voice in proper development of western route and management of harbor facilities Vancouver. Equalization freight rates removes an artificial barrier but urge upon you the need of early conference all interests to face frankly and courageously further problems attendant upon development of this route, including representation of producing interests of Vancouver harbor board."

Child Welfare in Alberta

What is considered to be one of the most important activities of the public health department of the Alberta Government, is that which has to do with child welfare.

Some five years ago, through the medium of the Women's Institutes of the Taber constituency, child welfare clinics were established throughout that district. Last year Bow Valley followed the example and in 1924 very successful clinics were held in both districts. In 1925 Cardston and Pembroke constituencies were added to the list. This method of organization proved satisfactory and economical. The organizations in these constituencies have already intimated their desire to the department to have the work repeated in the coming year.

Wheat Pool Membership

The Alberta wheat pool has now 36,259 members, and new contracts are coming in on every mail, according to advice from the head office of the pool in Calgary.

Provincial Legislature Opens

Attended by more than the usual pomp and ceremony, the final session of the present legislature of Alberta was opened Thursday afternoon. The speech from the throne read by the newly-appointed Lieutenant-Governor Win Egbert, foretold that important matters would be dealt with.

Fairs Association Convention

What was probably the best convention in the history of the Association was held at Edmonton by the Alberta Fairs Association. Many matters pertaining to the rural fairs were discussed, including a plan to link up with school fairs.

Coast Elevator for Pool

The three prairie wheat pools are planning the erection of a terminal elevator at Vancouver, it is announced.

EVERY AUTOMOBILE
NEEDS AN AIR CLEANER

BY ERWIN GREER
(President Greer College of Automotive Engineering, Chicago)

The dust which the gasoline engine of an automobile "inhales" acts like emery powder upon the bearings and the cylinder walls. Loose bearings and "slapping" pistons tell the story of the damage the dust has wrought. Prove it? Certainly!

Just a little dose of grit or dust, what does it do?
It wears the top ring and groove of each piston most, because there the oil is hottest and for that reason thinner or less viscous than it is elsewhere in the engine. The other parts do not escape, however. The grit works down past the pistons and is circulated by the oil through all the engine bearings. Whenever two surfaces rub together the grit takes its toll of metal.

If dust is completely excluded there is no reason why an automobile engine should not have as satisfactory a life as an engine of the same type used for marine work. Even a steam engine would not be more durable.

Scarcely an automobile or truck manufacturer is to be found who is not right now keenly interested in air cleaners with a view to devising a satisfactory one, or of finding one to purchase and put out as regular equipment on his product.

You and I, as automobile owners definitely demand longer engine life and less engine trouble. The manufacturer is striving to meet this demand. Two or three years ago there were only two makes of cars regularly equipped with air cleaners; two years from now those unequipped with air cleaners will be rare exceptions.

There are various kinds of air cleaners for sale in the automobile accessory stores throughout the country. You will need one.

A glance at the engine of your automobile will reveal at once whether the designer had any thought that the user might want to install an air cleaner. In a lot of instances it is merely a matter of using the screwdriver for many air cleaners are so designed as to fit your car.

The salesman will help you choose the air cleaner best adapted to your particular car. Get one, then check up repairs at the end of the year.

You will be surprised.

CALF BREEDING

When shipping cream to the market it is desirable to feed the calves by hand on skim milk, thus saving all of the cream and increasing the total returns. It is usually necessary however to use a special meal or fat substitute in the skim milk in order to induce the maximum growth and development of the calves.

A test was made at the Dominion Experimental Station at Scott in 1925 comparing two home made mixtures with a commercial preparation known as Royal Purple calf meal. The test covered a period of approximately four months. One home mixture was made up of two parts oat chop, two parts corn meal and one part flax seed all finely ground. The second home made meal was the same except that the corn meal was replaced by barley meal. Each meal or mixture was steeped in boiling water adding to the skim milk.

It is a good plan to feed whole milk for the first month and make the changes gradually, the first being the replacing of half the whole milk with skim milk when the calf is four weeks old, and include one ounce of calf meal and increase the proportion of skim milk and the quantity of calf meal gradually until the calf is getting one pound of the meal and 14 pounds of the skim milk when four months old.

The grain ration used was three parts bran two parts oat chop and one part alfalfa meal. The quantity fed was as much as the calves would eat readily. One hundred pounds gain in the Royal Purple lot cost $4.91 the lot getting corn meal, oats and flax cost $4.15 per 100 pounds gain, and the lot getting barley meal in the mixture $5.34 per 100 pounds gain.

The latter lot of calves did not do well which indicated that barley was not a satisfactory substitute for corn in a calf meal. The lot getting Royal Purple meal gained 10 pounds per head more than the second lot which received corn meal in the mixture but the home made meal containing the corn produced very satisfactory results and may be recommended for general use.

Further particulars supplied upon application.

FEEDERS: STOCKERS—Feeder steers were being weighed up from $4.00@$5.50; stock steers $3.00@$4.50; stock heifers $2.75@$3.50; stock cows $2.50@$3.25.

HOGS

Long haul hogs at Edmonton this week have sold for $13.75 with the balance going at $13.25.

GRAIN

Quotations at Winnipeg are being governed largely by foreign news which is inclined to be bearish.

BUTTERFAT—BUTTER—MILK

BUTTERFAT—Quotations advanced to 41c and 42c for special grade at centralizing and country point creameries respectively during last week. CREAMERY BUTTER—The make is light while on the other hand the demand is large. Vancouver expects another consignment from New Zealand in a couple of weeks. Montreal trade is firm. MILK—No change has been made in prices during the past week.

POULTRY—EGGS

POULTRY—The receipts of poultry are lighter since the snowstorm. There are a number of stags chickens being marketed which have been cut in price. The fowl are low as owners are holding on account of the good laying weather. There are a few turkeys arriving and they are moving out readily. EGGS—If the cold weather lasts, long enough it will make a great difference to the egg market. It will enable dealers to get rid of some of the large supply now on hand. Quotations are unchanged from last week.

HAY

Hay receipts have been light lately but will probably increase soon. Greedeed is in good demand but supplies are light. Feed oats are draggy and are worth from 34c@35c.

HIDES

Market conditions are practically the same as last week. Hides are receipts are increasing a little but it will be another month or more before it becomes really noticeable.

FURS

Rats, beaver, badger and dark mink are in good demand but the other lines are from 10 to 30 per cent lower. Coyote and lynx are very hard to move.

*The Atlas Lumber Co. have another carload of sawdust on track this week which is used to pack ice, and also fill in the walls of buildings for warmth in winter and to keep out the summer's heat. A double-wagon box heaping full for only $4.00 off the car.
